ETHICS and SUPERVISION

workshop details

Ethics and supervision is about learning, thinking, and behaving in ways that honor our professional values. While our clients, government, and laws constantly change- so must our professions. Are you prepared to adapt and professionally grow through these changes? Don't be vulnerable to becoming outdated and takie risks of hurting yourself, your practice setting, or your clients (or patients).

Join us for this CEU workshop about ethics and supervision while satisfying 6 continuing education hours for counselors, social workers, marriage and family therapists, substance abuse counselors, and nurses. This course will satisfy state hourly requirements for ethics (3 hours before lunch) and supervision (3 hours after lunch). 2 separate certificates are available upon request.

Jennifer Edlind is an attorney licensed in Ohio and New York. She currently works for a major healthcare system in the Compliance and Ethics department. She regularly trains professionals on the ever changing laws and regulations. Ryan Edlind is a licensed clinical social work supervisor (LISW-S) in private practice. He received a graduate degree in counseling and a graduate degree in social work. He also has over 17 years of practice experience, including supervisory and organizational leadership roles.
